1	Perimeter Defense	Deployment of routers, firewalls, IPS/IDS, Remote Access and network segmentation
2	Authentication	Network authentication through deployment of password policy for accessing the network resources. To minimize unauthorized access to the e-procurement system at system level.
3	Monitoring	Deployment of logging at OS/ network level and monitoring the same.
4	Secure configuration of network host	The security of individual servers and workstations is a critical factor in the defenses of any environment, especially when remote access is allowed. Workstations should have safeguards in place to resist common attacks.
5	System patching	As the vulnerability of the system are discovered almost regularly and system vendors are also releasing the patches. It is expected the host are patched with latest security updates released by the vendors.
6	Control of malware	Suitable control like anti-virus, anti spyware etc. should be deployed on the host associated with e-procurement system. However, option of running the services at non- privileged user profile may be looked for. Otherwise, suitable operating system which is immune to virus, Trojan and malware may be deployed.
7	Structured Cabling	The availability of the network services is critically dependent on the quality of interconnection between the hosts through structured including termination and marking. It is expected the e-procurement system has implemented structured cabling and other controls related with network and interconnection.

Error handling	The design should ensure that the application does

Input validation	The application may accept input at multiple from external sources, such as users, client applications, and data feeds. 4 Security in data storage and communication

Slno.	Issues	Best	Practices	to	achieve	security	Compliance(Y/N)	Remarks, consid	erations					supporting document, if any

1	Encryption for data storage	Sensitive data should be encrypted or hashed in the database or file system. The application should differentiate between data that is sensitive to disclosure and must be encrypted, data that is sensitive only to tampering and for which a key hashed value (HMAC) must be generated, and data that can be irreversibly transformed (hashed) without loss of functionality (such as passwords). The application should store keys used for decryption separately from the encrypted data. Examples of widely accepted strong ciphers are	if any 3DES, AES, RSA, RC4 and Blowfish. Use 128-bit keys (1024 for RSA) at a minimum.
2	Data transfer security	Sensitive data should be encrypted prior to transmission to other components. Verify that intermediate components that handle the data in clear text form, prior to transmission or subsequent to receipt, do not present an undue threat to the data. The application should take advantage of authentication features available within the transport security mechanism. Specially, encryption methodology like SSL must be deployed while communicating with the payment gateway over public network.
3	Access control	Applications should enforce an authentication mechanism that provides access to sensitive data and functionality only to suitably permitted users or clients. Role based access control should be enforced at the database level as well as the application interface. This will protect the database in the event that the client application is exploited. Authorization checks should require prior successful authentication to have occurred. All attempts to obtain access, without proper authorization should be logged. Conduct regular testing of key applications that process sensitive data and of the interfaces available to users from the internet. Include both "black box" "informed" testing against the application. Determine if users can gain access to data from other accounts.
